He said that the dispute between the two countries went back 120 years and that England had taken the attitude of protection for years, keeping control over the country for Ireland's own good. England also had her own welfare in view, he said, in keeping control.

BIG CHEESE STATE ROCK COUNTY COWS FIXES STANDARDS GOING TO COLORADO

Wisconsin Leads so Far That We Determine Tests.

Madison—The cheesemakers of Wisconsin who produce over two-thirds of the product manufactured in the nation, will meet at Milwaukee for their thirteenth annual convention January 11 to 13. J. L. Sammis, secretary of the association, announced today. He declared that this is to be "biggest cheese convention on earth."

Over 200 prizes are offered at the cheese show which heads the program of the meeting. In addition there are to be seven educational sessions, cheese grading demonstrations, a cheesemakers' scoring contest, demonstration of new milk inspection tests, and an exhibit of cheese machinery and supplies. Over 1,000 cheese makers are expected to be in attendance participating in the program.

On January 20 and continuing to February 1, dairy interests of Wisconsin will cooperate to celebrate 50 years of dairy progress in the state. Leaders from over the country will be asked to join the program for which an extensive program is being arranged.

State Dominates
The cheese industry of Wisconsin is the state's leading agricultural product, to a congressional committee, to so dominate the prices and costs of the product that a survey of the state may be taken as a criterion of cheese conditions in the whole industry.

A report by the college of agriculture on the cheese industry shows that it represents an annual business of more than $100,000,000 with this state's production of the product over two-thirds of the output for the entire country.

Shobogran is reported as the leading cheese county, with Marathon county second, and Clark county third. In the production of Swiss and Limburger cheese, Green and Lafayette counties are highest in production.

Swiss Cheese Makers
It is in Swiss counties that the Swiss adventurers coming to America more than 50 years ago found the rolling hills and valleys that reminded them so much of the homeland, the report says. Outside of Switzerland itself, there is probably no other area in the world so famed for the region.

For nearly 30 years, the report says, the winter dairy school of the College of Agriculture has trained cheesemakers who have gone out into the state. During that time more than 7,000 dairy manufacturers are said to have been trained.

In addition a Swiss cheese school is maintained and will be opened January 30 at Madison for the present year. Two weeks of intensive instruction is given.

Tests Invented
Invention of dairy tests by University of Wisconsin scientists is reported to have been a boon to the industry in the state. The Babcock milk test invented by Dr. S. M. Babcock is said to rank first in importance. Dr. H. W. Henshaw has also developed an acidity test used extensively; J. W. Decker, S. M. Babcock and H. L. Russell invented a curd test, and Dr. Henshaw the casin test, used by dairymen.

Manufacture of skim-milk cheese was practically legislated out of existence, the report declares, by a law requiring that the product be made in special sizes for which pressing hoops were not available.

WAS FORCED TO GIVE UP TRADE
Detroit Man Gains Twenty Pounds by Taking Tanlac and Is Now on Job Every Day.

"If there was ever a day in my life when I felt better than I do now I can't remember it; for Tanlac restored my health and built me up twenty pounds in weight," says Charles Sanderson, 350 Springfield Ave., Detroit, Mich.

"I suffered a general breakdown in health six years ago. My kidneys bothered me a great deal. I had pains in my back and I could hardly stoop over to lace up my shoes. My stomach went wrong, and I got to where I couldn't eat and relish anything. The little bit I did eat tasted so terribly, that at night I was pressed against my heart so bad I was often afraid to go to sleep for fear I would smother. I lost twenty-six pounds in weight and had to give up my trade as a moulder and take lighter work."

"Well, before I had taken half a bottle of Tanlac, I could see it in my mind. My appetite gradually left me, and in a little while I was eating and sleeping well and I soon left fine in every way. This was two years ago when my system was so thoroughly that I am feeling in the best of health yet."

Tanlac is sold in Janesville by McCue and Buss and leading druggists everywhere.

Field Agent Buys Holstein Grades Here for Western Farmers.

A carload of 25 grade Holsteins were shipped from Janesville to Colorado on Monday the cows having been bought in Rock county during the last week by M. K. Knapp, field agent representing the Colorado farmers. The average price for the Holsteins was $59.00 according to Mr. Knapp.

The cattle were obtained from a number of farms and an additional shipment is to be made in the summer. The cows were tubercular tested and most of them had test association records.

"The farmers of Weld county, which represents the largest proportion of having about 300,000 acres of alfalfa with a price ranging from four to six dollars a ton," declared Mr. Knapp. "They have decided to feed the alfalfa to their cattle. We have heard of Rock county and they pooled their orders and sent me here to buy. We hope to come again for I certainly have heard about 300,000 acres of alfalfa."

There were five condensers in Weld county, Colorado, and the dairy plant is growing in importance. Also there are five sugar beet factories and 80,000 acres planted in beets the last year and about 300,000 acres of wheat on the irrigated lands.

While in Rock county Mr. Knapp was shown the grade Holstein herds by Farm Bureau Secretary C. E. Holstein.

Small Per Cent of State is Improved Land

Madison—The state department of agriculture is its statistical report prepared by Joseph A. Decker, says that only 37 per cent of the total area of Wisconsin is improved land, although 67 per cent of the area of 22 southern counties is developed.

During the past ten years the improved area increased from 11,905,000 acres to 12,500,000 the report says. It estimates that 10,500,000 acres of land fit for cultivation are undeveloped, leaving 82 per cent of the entire area to still be improved.

The increased number of farms, evident in the state, are in size of 20 to 50 acres, the report declares. The number in this group increased from 135,906 in 1909 to 152,102 in 1920, while the number of larger farms decreased from 30,574 in 1909 to 26,312 in 1920.

Light Fools Poultry, Increasing Production
Electric light for the hens pays. Many Rock county poultry raisers have learned that by increasing the hours of their hens they increase egg production. With eggs at 65 cents a dozen it pays to burn lights in the hen house.

Edw. H. Henshaw has installed a farm near Edgerton, has 175 White Leghorns. He used to get from 40 to 50 eggs a day. Then he put six bulbs in the hen house and turned the lights on at dusk and off again between 8:30 and 7 p. m. The lights are on again about 4 a. m. Now his egg production runs between 140 and 150 eggs a day.

The hens belong to no union or association against long hours of work. The increased production, the owner says, is from careful feeding and making the flock work longer.

Bancroft, for reelection in the fifth judicial circuit, will probably open January 16, according to the Milwaukee Journal. A date of venue from Judge Bancroft at Milwaukee has been asked. The charge is made for former Judge Bancroft that Hutton, through the anti-saloon league, circulated literature which was untruthful, and in violation of the state corrupt practices act. The league supported Sherman P. Smalley, who was elected. Hutton was arrested charged with violating the law last winter, following the election in November, 1920. He pleaded not guilty when arraigned.

POLITICS MUST GIVE WAY TO ECONOMICS

(and consequently a considerable fraction of our own and of world commerce) is dependent upon each state erecting:

(1) A balance in taxation and expenditure.
(2) Currency reorganization and stabilization.

(3) Wise control of their exports and imports.
(4) Credits for reproductive purposes.

"It is hopeless to expect that private capital will extend credits for export to these states upon any systematic basis. The first three have been complied with. Furthermore, attempts to secure those three vital reforms by action through various governments result in them being wrangled on the rocks of conflicting political objectives of such governments."

Free from Political Action

"The Ter Mullen plan proposes to facilitate credits for exports by the ordinary processes of the market. The three primary reforms have been initiated. This should act as a great pressure to secure the reforms and it is hoped that the battle for rehabilitation of credits and commerce with these states."

"I have the feeling, however, that something more must be done than port credits to those countries if the three primary reforms are to be accomplished, that is some assistance must be found to these states in the way of direct action. Currency reform, I have already suggested in another place that some action might be taken by the great banks of issue of the principal European states to the formulation of a plan to facilitate solution of this portion of the problem; thus again keeping away from political action in the economic domain. Such a plan in no way replaces the Ter Mullen plan as the two plans would supplement each other."

Stabilize Germany

"I may say I believe also that vital as such steps are to such a contribution) yet again until there can be brought about some financial stabilization in Germany, all other European states will be adversely affected despite every effort implied in any of these ideas."

The Ter Mullen plan to which Mr. Hoover returned evolved into a financial conference at Brussels and embraced the listing of all available assets of the business men of each country and the issuance of government bonds. Bonds against these assets which would be in the nature of a collateral or guarantee of payment for purchases made in foreign countries. The plan does not apply either to Germany or Russia. The difficulty of including Germany is that her assets are more or less pledged as reparations to France on account of the war. The chaotic condition of Russian politics, and the unwillingness of the powers to deal with the bolshevik government, trade with Russia has been at a standstill.

Take the British View

The viewpoint here, however, is closer to that held by the British than the French. When Mr. Lloyd George says that politically he is no more sympathetic with Germany than he was during the war but that the amount Germany can pay is not a sentimental but a practical question, his ideas find a ready echo in American official circles. The French and British have developed strained relations on this point and until the Washington conference produced a deadlock on the submarine issue, the disposition was to take a more or less indifferent view toward the French-British split. The drift lately has been to support the British contention that economic reconstruction can never be accomplished through political objectives but through material examination of the economic facts in the whole situation.

SHOULD WIVES BE TRAINED?

By FREDERIC J. HASKIN

Washington, D. C.—That the task of being a wife and mother should be numbered among the learned professions and taught in the high schools and colleges is an idea that seems to be steadily gaining ground.

It got another recommendation the other day when W. S. Katozoff, a well known psychoanalyst, told the Bridgeport board of education that it should immediately establish high school classes for the purpose of training girls in the difficult business of being wives. He said that American girls get no training at home in this line, and that therefore the schools must give it. He placed all the blame for divorce and the general failure of marriage on the ignorance of American girls.

Apparently Dr. Katozoff was concerned chiefly with the girl's position as wife rather than as mother, and his conclusion is not altogether surprising. Working for others he thought was a crime. A waste of his efforts, a waste of his time; seeking the profit he owed to his wife. Making the world what he finds it today. Now at the end of his road, he has learned. He who spurns others shall some day be spurned.

"I am the fellow," thought Old Man McNabb, "All for myself I must bustle to grab." Plutonic doctrine and horrible creed. Fashioned in selfishness, built on greed. Turn from yourself just as far as you can. Think less of profit and more of the man. Make it a good world for others, and they will make it a good world for you every day.

SAD CASE OF MCNABB

"I am the fellow," said Old Man McNabb, "All for myself I must bustle to grab." Plutonic doctrine and horrible creed. Fashioned in selfishness, built on greed. Turn from yourself just as far as you can. Think less of profit and more of the man. Make it a good world for others, and they will make it a good world for you every day.

Old Man McNabb sits alone in his wealth, Broken in spirit and broken in health. "Gold is the world," he declares, all alone; over a trillion he has must have known. Nobody stops at his door, nobody calls. Nobody pauses a kind word to say. Now he discovers, with life near its end, One can grab money but can't grab a friend.

He wanted it all for himself, did McNabb. Greedy and selfish and eager to grab. Working for others he thought was a crime. A waste of his efforts, a waste of his time; seeking the profit he owed to his wife. Making the world what he finds it today. Now at the end of his road, he has learned. He who spurns others shall some day be spurned.

CURE OF INGROWING NAIL

Before uncorking the medicine let us briefly but succinctly recapitulate: (1) Ingrowing nail is caused by forcing narrow, pointed shoes or shoes of any shape or size that flare out too far from the natural straight inside sole line. Normal feet should wear straight shoes. (2) There is no such condition as ingrowing nail. Ordinarily I deny an entity before entering upon a discussion of the cause, prevention or treatment thereof, but in this instance I have to be a little more circumspect because nearly anyone can see an ingrowing nail. If he has one. In spite of that there is no such thing. The nail never grows of the flesh irritated and inflamed beyond the endurance of mortal flesh grows up under and over the edge of the nail. Anybody with an ingrowing nail should be ashamed of himself for two good reasons. First, because it comes from ignorance and vanity in the selection of shoes and secondly because it is less painful and less expensive to cure from the very beginning than it is to cure from such an annoyance is inexhaustibly inefficient.

Under home treatment, or self treatment, I appeal to the intelligence of the victim by urging the importance of adopting shoes built to fit feet. About the only relief consists in the careful application of adhesive strips in such manner as to draw the inflamed, infected, raw, "proud flesh," as doctors call it, exuberant granulations away from the edge of the nail. This must be freely applied each day. The skin must be kept free from any oil. The plaster must be handled—rather than handled—with a great care for a touch of the fingers to the adhesive surface lessens its adhesiveness. The strips, cut half inch wide or a little less, is fixed first on the skin at the edge of the nail, and then drawn around inside and under the nail and attached in a spiral fashion. The course of straight traction this makes on the flesh and skin is of no value if the same old shoes are worn that originally crowded and pressed the inflamed flesh against the edge of the nail. When the strip has been applied, sprinkle in the groove or upon the "proud flesh" some powdered salve.

The best treatment for ingrown nail is a little operation which any physician can do in his office or at the patient's home, under a local anesthetic. It consists of excision of a wedge of flesh including the edge of the nail. This is a rather less dangerous operation than the one described above.

Dinner Stories

It looked to her like a big idea. She had discovered one of those elusive, seductive, tantalizing little tips, so popular now, in which the mere spinning of it gives one opportunity to take one, take all, pay three, etc. Being an Indianapolis school teacher, she immediately noted it as a novelty.

"Such a clever little thing," she said to the clerk. "I've never seen a top like it before. What are they for?"

"Well, they're a lot of diversion," the saleswoman replied. "Many people use them financially. They're a quick breath, a sign of heart disease" (Mrs. W. P. J.).

Answer—No.

How to Sleep Well.

Is it harmful to sleep lying face downward on your stomach? I have found out that I can fall asleep more quickly and that I sleep more soundly when I lie on my back. That is a natural and healthful position for sleep. Lying on the back, the head is in a straight line with the spine, and the weight of the head is supported by the neck muscles. When sleeping, though it is perhaps more natural to lie prone or semi-prone, say on other side with limbs curled up or straightened out as you prefer.

I have been using hair lotion and it has become very watery. I have been using hair powder and it has become very dusty. I have been using hair spray and it has become very sticky. Who's Who Today

MICHAEL COLLINS.

At 31, Michael Collins, commander-in-chief of the Irish republican army and member of the Sinn Fein cabinet, stands out as one of the living heroes of Ireland.

Collins, born in 1890 on a farm in County Cork, was just a year old when the War of Independence broke out. By that time he had attended King's college, London, and was soon to leave the postoffice to work for the Guinness brewery in London.

In that occupation he apparently got his training to be the finance minister of Sinn Fein. But at the same time he was not neglecting his military responsibilities. He and 200 of the other London Irish fled secretly at Wormwood Scrubs, and as a big, highly energetic man, he was one of the leading spirits.

In 1915, at 25, he returned to Dublin and worked as an accountant, and later as secretary to the Sinn Fein leader, Count Plunkett.

He fought in the rebellion of 1916 and was one of those deported to Wandsworth prison and later to Frongoch internment camp.

The rise of Michael Collins in Sinn Fein circles took place between 1915 and the election of 1917, when he became a member of Dail Eireann from his home district of South Cork.

In that period he acted as secretary to a special Sinn Fein convention after amnesty was granted; was extremely active in regard to the Irish republican army and was marked for the work of organizer and adjutant from 1915 on.

A. The best way of exterminating the nuisance is to spread among the water hyacinths their natural enemies, the water weeds, water pests (Bladder Canadensis); further, to disseminate among them some virulent disease capable of destroying them, and finally to remove the bridges so that the mass of obstructing plants may be freely carried out into the ocean.

THE MURDER OF CHRISTIANNA BRICKSON.

What of the murderer of Christianna Brickson? Can a woman, aged, harmless, in the ordinary pursuit of her daily life, at her own home, by the threshold of her own door, be slain in cold blood, for a few paltry dollars and no punishment follow? What guarantee is there that other women, alone in their homes, may not meet the same fate in Rock county with the same assurance that the crime will never be detected?

Some one killed Christianna Brickson. That same someone shot her within almost an arm's length of her own new house, robbed her of a check and left her to die in the freezing night—a murderer as ruthless as a Turk, as vicious as a rattlesnake, as unforgiving as a wolf, and clever enough to trick the whole body of men who are supposed to be guardians of the peace of the community.

The stolen check was cashed. Whoever committed the murder got paid for his crime. He received his $40. It was enough to take him a long way off, but apparently he was just as safe had he not strayed from Janesville. In the meantime the body of Christianna Brickson rests in its unconfined bed, and the silence and the voiceless lips are the most bitter arraignment of the failure of justice.

About the only way to tame a U-boat is to tie a bomb to its tail.

WHAT THE IRISH PEACE PACT MEANS.

Ireland is at the threshold of a great task following the acceptance of the peace treaty with Great Britain and the establishment of the Irish Free State. There is a constitution to be framed, codes of laws to be established, a great civil service to be organized for the new state, police, courts, administrative offices, legislative bodies and all that come to a new country. But it is a matter of congratulation and of satisfaction that all this will be done by the people of the island themselves and will not come ready-made from the hands of some persons or a people foreign to those of Ireland. It marks a great historical event—an event that would glorify the soul of Robert Emmett and Daniel O'Connell, of Parnell and the elder O'Brien, could they but be on earth to share in the advancement of their people from bondage, and legalized serfdom to that of freemen.

It will be noted that the fighting men of Ireland—those who bore arms in the revolutionary army; those who bared their breasts to the Black and Tans and the constabulary generally, those who were hunted but who never wavered, were solidly for the treaty. The opposition was largely from the other side, the politicians who were generally safe, and the inactive ones in the propaganda. But the men like Milk Collins, the subject of the Sinn Fein organization, and Arthur Griffith, another fighter, were in favor of ratification and they won. Having won, it is now their task to establish firmly the government of Ireland to the glory and future success of the Emerald Isle.

It would appear that the "Harp that once through Tara's Halls" has been tuned up again.

HOROSCOPE

THE STARS INCLINE, BUT DO NOT COMPEL.

MONDAY, JANUARY 9, 1922.

This should be a lucky day, according to astrology, for Uranus and Venus rule in friendly power. Saturn and Neptune are slightly in the ascendant. During this week, entertainments that bring together persons of intellect and parties that appeal to the higher side of human nature should be especially successful.

Balls and receptions this evening should be marked by enthusiasm that promotes real enjoyment. For a long course of settlement if the bride and bridegroom are young, but widows and widowers may find it an unfavorable date.

It is a happy wedding day, for a long course of settlement if the bride and bridegroom are young, but widows and widowers may find it an unfavorable date.

The direction of the stars is ex-actly in favor of educational enterprises and the stars declare that community institutions will flourish exceedingly.

Motion pictures have the forecast of a new year in which production will reach a higher standard of artistic excellence than ever before. The stars indicate standardization of the industry in a manner that insures its highest possible development.

Theatres should benefit at this time and the end of the season should be very successful. New plays and new stars will win fame.

Trouble over marital matters is strongly foreshadowed and it may be serious by the beginning of spring.

Great extremes are to mark 1922, for while the world will make long strides toward co-operation which assures peace, there will be events of grave moment to the nations of the earth.

Stars, which became the morning star with the opening of the new year, is read as "indictment," an unbroken reign of materiality during the next few months.

Modesty is to still one of the lost characteristics of humanity, according to the forecast for the year.

Children born on this day will probably have very pleasant lives. They will prosper best as trusted employees.

PETER FISHER AND THE LIQUOR LAW.

Peter Fisher, former district attorney of Kenosha county, who resigned his office following an altercation in a road house, has been convicted by a jury on the charge of bribery. It was proved that he had taken money to protect vice and liquor law violators. His conviction is another step in the cleaning of mud from the administrative petticoat of the county and city of Kenosha. It was a pretty tough outlook at first with all the protected vice and the power of the ring which had been formed through the illicit handling of whiskey, behind the violation of law. Fisher's case must renew the faith of the people in the law and give them again a strong resolution to combat all the machinations of the whiskey rings of the state.

It is also a warning to the people in the coming campaign when the whiskey interests will, by every subtle method, attempt to break down the laws both of the state and the federal government in reference to liquor, that no man should be sent to the legislature who is not pledged to support the Eighteenth amendment and the laws made for its enforcement.

GOVERNOR BLAINE FOR THE U. S. SENATE

There seems to be a movement of more than mere suggestion that John J. Blaine be a candidate for the United States senate this coming election and that he go before the primary. Mr. Blaine is an ambitious man, in the prime of campaigning vigor and taking a cue from the past and his nearest associates has every reason to aspire higher than the governorship. In Wisconsin Mr. Blaine has by affiliation grown to the leadership of that political collection made up of the nonpartisan league and those radical elements which heretofore have rallied around another man but seem to be ready to choose a new and more active man for the senatorship. One can readily see that it is not one bed of roses to be governor with a hostile legislature and a divided administration and that the atmosphere of the National Capital is far to be preferred to the restricted activities of the executive offices at Madison.

Then too six years more is a long time to wait and opportunity is a furtive thing. Also it is hard on the nerves for Blaine to wait for the mantle of Elijah. And again Mr. Blaine is a most excellent campaigner and there are many who are tired of being bossed by the same boss to no purpose but more power to the boss.

If Governor Blaine enters the field as a candidate for the senate the Gazette believes that the campaign of 1922 will be the most intensely interesting of any in 20 years.

ST. LOUIS

Thrown out of a job in his father's livery stable, George thought he would spend a recuperative Thanksgiving at his country place. George thought he would. He was going to work again for Blodgett next summer.

Betty and Mrs. Bailey were the last callers the nurse would give into, although she must have seen how they helped, one in a chair on either side of the bed, and it was difficult not to look in only once in her eyes he sought for a souvenir of these tears, and wanted to tell her how sorry he was; but he was so sorry and angry she mustn't guess that he knew. Why had Mrs. Bailey bothered to tell him at all? Could her motherly instinct hope for a coming together so far back as the memory of the remote portrait reminded him that it was incredible in every way. He sighed. Betty beckoned Mrs. Bailey and rose.

"Don't go," George begged, aware that he could not see her to go. "Betty was having tea with me," Mrs. Bailey offered.

"I would have asked to be brought next time," Betty said. "You frightened us yesterday. We've all wanted to find out the truth."

There was in her eyes now at least a reminiscent pain.

"Don't worry," he said. "I'll take care of Lawrence Plantier for you after all."

He grasped her hand. The touch of her flesh, combined with such a memory, made him momentarily forgetful. He held her hand, and then he saw the color waver in her pale cheeks. He let her hand go, but he continued to watch her eyes until they turned uncertainly to Mrs. Bailey.

When they had left he slept again. He slept away his listlessness of the past few weeks. As he confided to his callers, who were confined to an hour in the afternoon, he did nothing but sleep and eat. He was no longer the same. He had been since his different days, long past, at Oakmont. All these people had deserted him. He had acquired, even for such clashing types as Wendell and Allen, a value that survived his football. He had advanced on a road where he had not been before. He had been sure that thought. Next Saturday he would reward these friends, for he was confident he could do it now. By Wednesday he was up and dressed. He felt better than he had since the commencement of the season. If only they didn't hurt his head again. The newspapers helped there, too. If he played, they said, he would be under a handicap. He smiled, knowing he was far better, except for his head, than he had been the week before.

Until the squad left for New Haven he remained in the infirmary, watching the light practice of the last days without even putting on his football clothes.

"The lay-off won't hurt me," he promised.

Colman and Green were content to accept his judgment.

As soon as he was able he went to his room and got Sylvia's portrait. He disciplined himself for his temporary absence, following the advice of the doctor. He tried to force from his memory the sentiment aroused by Betty's tears through the thought that he approached his first real chance to impress his friends with his own playing, an animal insufficiently exercised, straining to be away.

"It'll be all right," George kept saying. "If you'll fix a headache to cover my new soft spot."

And finally—

"It'll be all right if you'll only leave me alone."

Yet, when they had, George came, totally forgetful of his game, to the door of the classroom, no disaster nearly as serious as a defeat by Yale—now that we've done so well against Harvard, and would have to let it go if you hadn't been hurt. I'll play the length of the sick room until the nurse lost her temper and drove him out. Then Goodhue arrived as the herald of Josiah Blodgett, of all people.

"This does me good, George," said the nurse.

And it did. For the first time in a number of weeks he felt amused as he walked with a plump old lady who massaged his round, unhealthy face.

"Thought you didn't like football," George said.

"The reason to like it now," Blodgett jerked out. "Only sensible place to play it is the front yard of a hospital. Thought I'd come down and watch you, and maybe look up what was left afterward."

George fancied a wavering of the little eyes in Goodhue's direction, and became even more amused, for he had never seen the calculating man that Blodgett didn't live; yet there seemed

True Detective Stories

Boland, Alias Gardner

When Hyman and Hess, dealers in clocks and suits on State street, Albany, N. Y., received a check for $387.10 to Reis and Blum, garment manufacturers in New York city, they didn't have the slightest idea that they were settling to a young man, who would land one of the cleverest crooks in America behind the bars.

A few days later, before the New York firm had had time to report the arrival of the check and thus permit Hyman and Hess to look in to the matter, a young man came into the National Commercial bank in Albany and presented a check for $380, made out to "Bearer." The date on the check filled in with a rubber stamp, corresponded to the day on which was presented, and the man who had the check was a young fellow mentioned casually that the check "was to cover back to New York in order to complete the transaction. The paying teller, feeling certain that the signature was genuine, cashed the check, and the man who had presented it walked out of the bank with $380 in his pocket.

When Hyman and Hess, and their partner, the bald-headed man they found that they were exactly $380 short for the original check had never reached its New York destination, but had been lifted out of the man's pocket by a gang of clever criminals, the body of the check erased with an ink eraser, and the date and amount filled in on top of the original signature.

"One man in the country could have done that, and gotten away with it," growled George A. Fuller, assistant superintendent of the Pinkerton Detective agency, who the bank called the details of the case to his attention. "It's Boland's work."

Out of the mail box of an up-town apartment house one of Boland's apprentices secured a check for $50 made out to a real estate company in payment of the rental for one of the apartments. It was child's play for Boland to make off the original name and amount and to write in the words "Bearer and Two Hundred and Eleven Dollars." Once that was done, he had a perfectly good check (apparently) and he sent one of his men down to the bank on which the check was drawn, with minute instructions as to the cashing of it. But the cashier, being suspicious of a check of this size being made out to "Bearer"—particularly as he knew that the woman whose signature appeared upon it was very careful in her financial dealings—declined to cash it. Boland's man returned with a story of having been watched and therefore very fearful to approach the paying window.

Boland, in a spirit of bravado, again altered the check, this time making it out to the name of "William Hath" and set forth to cash the check himself, something which he had never before attempted. One glance at the odd amount—$211—and the recollection that a check of similar size had been presented that morning, payable to "Bearer," was enough to convince the paying teller that something was amiss. The Pinkertons were immediately notified.

Fifteen minutes after his case filed and Boland was caught red-handed. Boland, who had wanted to come up in the County court in St. Louis, was taken to the County Jail. Boland was caught red-handed. Boland, who had wanted to come up in the County court in

by Carlyle H. Holcomb

BIG-HEARTED MR. MOON HELPS

How happy Tinker Bob, the King, was when he thought of the Wonderful Creature of His Desire and how he could depend on what Old Man Experience said. Just anything he wanted to know he could know by tapping the Stone of Knowledge. Never had the Beautiful Creature disappointed him in all of his wonderful life with the folks of the forest.

"Tinker was liking his forest friends better every day because he was getting better acquainted with them. Mr. Fox had told him he would when he first met the old man on his way to the bridge last night. Tinker was the happiest fellow in the world because he was helping the creatures of the forest to know each other better."

"After all," he said, "when we know each other better we like each other better." That was a true saying and Tinker Bob could tell it to everyone in the world.

"Silky," said he, "I want to tell every child in the world the story I learned from Old Man Experience, about knowing each other better."

"Well, just tell it to Jerry, the Jay bird, and it will not be long before he'll be able to tell it to everyone else."

"Of course you must tell Jerry not to say a word about it and then he'll be sure to tell everyone he meets."

"The jays exclaimed Tinker Bob, 'Do you think Jerry would tell everyone in the world? Maybe he would, but the folks of the forest wouldn't believe him if he did.'

"O King look here! We are almost at the place where Jerry told us that Chief Porky was in trouble."

Tinker Bob looked over the edge of the Magic Basket and sure enough they were almost to the spot. The big hearted Mr. Moon had heard about the Chief's journey and came out to help if he could, and he did.

"Look, there he is now! He is all rolled up in a ball. But what a looking creature that is beside him!"

The King looked to see a creature with horns, and his nose standing out far from the forest Chief, Major Tuesday—Many Creatures in the Forest.

BEAUTY CHATS by Edna Kent Forbes

GRACE AND POISE

Many girls complain that they feel self-conscious in the company of strangers, that they do not quite know what to do with their hands and feet. This feeling of being all hands

ture when she sat down, I am sure she would lose most of that self-conscious feeling. In other words, she needs to acquire grace of movement and poise. Here is one way to acquire that.

There is a simple beneficial exercise which strengthens the ankles, makes the calves of the legs well developed and, thereby, strengthens the arches and toes of the foot. It will make you stand better and it will make you walk more gracefully. It is as follows:

Stand in your bare feet or stocking feet, preferably before a mirror, so you can watch yourself exercise. Raise the heels from the floor, your whole weight on the balls of the feet. Go back to the first position, then rise again to the toes, a little bit higher this time, so that the weight seems to go almost entirely on the toes. Repeat this at least a dozen times. Then, after you have rested, walk around the room five or six times as far up on your toes as you can get without losing your balance.

When you become accustomed to this exercise, raise the heels a little higher, so you will be able to walk very well on the toes without losing your balance. This exercise is given to ballet dancers to make them swifter in movement.

Poising—If your arms and legs are thin you are probably very much underweight. Try to make yourself fatter by taking two tablespoonful of olive oil with grape juice every day or by drinking a great deal of milk with cream in it.

Then take exercise for the arms and legs. Stand with the hands stretched out in front of you and the feet stretched and put the arms back to the shoulders, tensing the muscles and resisting yourself as much as possible. This is an excellent arm exercise. Dancing is good exercise for developing the legs.

Today's Short Story

By GEORGE T. BYE

Illustrations by ARLENE COYLE

Eastward, Ho!

The young farmer's name was Samuel Warner. His wife was Tillie. People felt sorry for them the first few weeks because they knew Sam and Tillie were sick of their bargain. They had bought this eastern farm only to find it was a disappointment. It was a small place, with only a few acres—on representations that it was ideally suitable for fruit, eggs, and vegetable production "with great markets, only a few hours away from the city." Sam and Tillie had been told that it was a great little country estate that formerly had been a large house.

"Get a couple cows and sell milk to the crowd along the road," advised the late owner of the farm. "That'll keep you going through the winter. Believe me, you'll make money. That was one of my ideas in selling the farm. We needed a farmer to manage it, and you were the best West to get a real farmer like you. You're going to be happy you made the change. You will see."

Sam bought two cows, and the milk business had begun to pay at once. It was well advertised, the appearance of the cows in the neighborhood brought parties of artists every five days to Sam's pasture. The artists had long been wanting cows for studies. One day one of the Jersey was sketched wearing a headpiece between its horns. Some magazine had ordered a picture of a cow dressed in the style of the ancient Egyptians.

One other day Sam was dragged into posing himself. Before long Tillie was a model too. The Warner house became the rendezvous of the rural neighborhood. The Warners had a larger income through the winter than they had expected.

Changes took place in the Warner home. Tillie was not quite worked up to a Balk fever, but in a nearby village she bought some red and green calico that she wore and not a clear-cut hanging from her mouth. Sam's metamorphosis lay principally in his hair. He combed it straight back now and created it tight to his head, like a naturopath's hair.

Sam's metamorphosis lay principally in his hair. He combed it straight back now and created it tight to his head, like a naturopath's hair. Sam was a friendly and easy way among his friends, but he never pretended to be anything else than a farmer, a man of strength, among intellectuals.

It wasn't really Sam's fault. An artist's wife made a fuss over him and pretended she was running away from him.

If all housekeepers would try a plan of a "reserve dinner," they need never feel any inconvenience when the husband telephone that he is bringing home a guest, or when friends are coming unexpectedly "to stay to lunch." Have a shelf in your cupboard that always holds some canned goods that, with the help of a fire, can be made into a delicious meal. Sound extracts of dry beef to make bouillon, canned meat which can be simply heated and served with a thickened gravy or made into croquettes; a few of the best quality of canned vegetables, and some canned peaches, pears, and strawberries; and a canned plum pudding. Thus, with very little labor, you can serve soup, meat and vegetables, eggs or vegetable salad, and a sauce for pudding; or beat ten cents' worth of thick cream and have canned peaches with whipped cream. So keep a few choice crackers in the pantry, and for soup, and fancy dainties to serve with desserts if the cake tin should be empty when a guest happens in for a cup of afternoon tea. As one can be used replenish the supply, so you are never at a loss for an unexpected dinner.

A yard stick hung on a slender ring, and the yard at the right of the sewing machine is often a convenient servant. The tape line with a hole punched in one end, may be hung near it, so both measures will be "within reach."

Green peas and carrots are delicious served with spaghetti to which a little grated cheese has been added.

Heart and Home Problems

By ELIZABETH THOMPSON.

Letters May be Addressed to Mrs. Thompson, in Care of the Gazette.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: Two years ago my husband and I lived next door to a young married couple. We became great friends and almost every night we were at their house or they were at ours having a good time. Then they moved to another city and we did not see each other.

We have no children and they had one baby. Now I have had a letter from the husband saying that there is another baby and his wife has died. Before she died she said that if all people in the world she wanted me to bring up her little baby. The other child will be taken care of by his parents, who are living.

My husband wants me to take the little one, but already I am so tied down with work that week in and week out I can't get away and have with him. Her husband looked at it lightly when she came back a week later, but Tillie would have nothing more to do with Sam.

pleasure. When you have advised tired mothers to sew with church ladies and to entertain their friends for lunch I have smiled, because I know how much time the average mother has to do such things.

"Do you think I am duty bound to take the baby?"

"You are not bound to take the baby and I do not believe you should do so unless you really want the little thing. Above all, babies should be wanted. The child's grandmother would love it and it would be better for the little one to be with his own people and the other child than to be your home unless it is welcomed by great love."

Have you thought that the father might pay you for keeping the child, which would be only right, and with that you could hire help which would give you more time to enjoy life and to give to your own children and the other little one? Do not let money govern your decision, however, for you would be doing the child a wrong to take it for that reason.

Banking our hearts with violets—

Some of us, most of us, I fear, try to shut out the winter bliteness by walling ourselves in with the memories and pride of our past years. The dead leaves of our once vigorous growth, the withered stalks of our dreams. Closer and closer we gather our dead accumulations about us.

What do we care if we have ringed our spirits with young growth, with budding dreams, with ever-rooting hope? Banked in with violets—that is the best, I think.

GRACE AND POISE

Many girls complain that they feel self-conscious in the company of strangers, that they do not quite know what to do with their hands and feet. This feeling of being all hands

ture when she sat down, I am sure she would lose most of that self-conscious feeling. In other words, she needs to acquire grace of movement and poise. Here is one way to acquire that.

There is a simple beneficial exercise which strengthens the ankles, makes the calves of the legs well developed and, thereby, strengthens the arches and toes of the foot. It will make you stand better and it will make you walk more gracefully. It is as follows:

Stand in your bare feet or stocking feet, preferably before a mirror, so you can watch yourself exercise. Raise the heels from the floor, your whole weight on the balls of the feet. Go back to the first position, then rise again to the toes, a little bit higher this time, so that the weight seems to go almost entirely on the toes. Repeat this at least a dozen times. Then, after you have rested, walk around the room five or six times as far up on your toes as you can get without losing your balance.

When you become accustomed to this exercise, raise the heels a little higher, so you will be able to walk very well on the toes without losing your balance. This exercise is given to ballet dancers to make them swifter in movement.

Poising—If your arms and legs are thin you are probably very much underweight. Try to make yourself fatter by taking two tablespoonful of olive oil with grape juice every day or by drinking a great deal of milk with cream in it.

Then take exercise for the arms and legs. Stand with the hands stretched out in front of you and the feet stretched and put the arms back to the shoulders, tensing the muscles and resisting yourself as much as possible. This is an excellent arm exercise. Dancing is good exercise for developing the legs.

February 2, Janesville Day at State Bowling Tournament

SPECIAL TRAIN TO CARRY 250 KNIGHTS TO MADISON DRIVES

Thursday, February 2, has been designated as "Janesville Day" on the official schedule of the Wisconsin Bowling Association for the 1922 state tournament.

"We expect to have a special train to carry our 250 bowlers and their families to Madison and back, and we will make the trip with us whether they take an active part in the bowling or not," said Dr. S. T. Richards, chairman of the local booster committee working for the 1922 tournament. "We shall make arrangements for the local players and let Madison know we are very much alive."

Dr. Richards announced that he still has entries for 18 teams which are not filled up, but that he has not yet had time to get the entries in. He said he has left it to Dr. Richards to get bowlers to represent them.

Need 50 Men

"I need 50 men who can take the day off and can pay their own expenses," said Dr. Richards. "I need 10 of those who can make the trip with me at $1.00 a day, and the rest I will take care of."

BRINGING UP FATHER

Benz Was to Have Fought as Sub Against Leonard

Milwaukee—Among the several lightweights under consideration to substitute for Billy Mitchell, who suffered a severe case of neuritis in the left shoulder, the night previous to his match with Benny Leonard, was Norman Benz, the new Butternut, Wis., sensation, who needs Bobby Ward of St. Paul at Janesville, Jan. 20.

When others appealed to the promoter insisted on an exorbitant purse to meet the champion, Benz pleaded with his manager, Billy Mitchell, to suggest his name. Although the Butternut boy has been fighting less than a year, he has gained many admirers who felt he would hold his own with Benny.

In the meantime, however, the boxing commission called off the show. No one felt worse over losing the opportunity than Benz. His 17 stentist victories over some of the best boys in the west have gained for him a world of confidence. His greatest ambition is to reach the top rung of the pugilistic ladder.

GREEN BAY IS HOT FOR TOURNAMENT

Janesville Must Show More Enthusiasm to Land 1923 Pin Meet.

BY DR. S. F. RICHARDS

Chairman of the 1923 State Bowling Tournament Booster Committee.

All eyes of the state are on Janesville and Green Bay.

This contest for the 1923 bowling tournament has developed into a matter of civic pride. Green Bay is out to show the state her business men are a more wide-awake crowd than others. Janesville simply cannot afford to let this matter slip.

The northern "influence," which started Green Bay in her drive for the tournament, is now working for votes for Green Bay. Abe Langtry, secretary of the American Bowling Congress, has this to say:

"Green Bay has some live wires—it is well they have. The real solid people who have the confidence of the Bay bowlers as well as the business men, which enables them to put over the big time stuff. Green Bay is needed for Janesville is not letting any grass grow under her feet and would have had a walkaway if the Green Bay people had not been approached for support in securing entries."

Assured Good Support.

We will have the support of the voters from the southern half of the state, including Fond du Lac, which, as far as I can find out, by word from these people, will make our chances about 50-50.

Our desire for this tournament will be judged by the showing we make in the number of entries and the support we give Madison in this year's tournament. We have some teams that will place well up in the prize list but will not count as much as the evidence of real desire for this tournament that our business men can show by getting behind this proposition and sending entries.

Final Drive This Week.

This week a final drive will be made for more teams. The city could show its earnestness by the way they are closing up on the afternoon of "Janesville Day" and going to Madison 500 strong to show the state we are really alive. Should we land the 1923 tournament, it would be a mild surprise.

Let's boost our city. The more teams we send, the better are our chances. It makes no difference how well or how poorly we bowl, what we want is at least 50 teams representing Janesville in Madison on Feb. 2.

A 10-dollar bill will enter a team. Let's not let Wisconsin think there are not 50 "ten-spots" in Janesville.

PAT WOULD SWAP GROH, KOPE, WINGO FOR NEW BUNCH, PIRATES PREFERRED

It has been known for some time that Pat Moran, leader of the once-champion Cincinnati Reds, wants to make important changes in the personnel of his Redlegged outfit. Heinie Groh is one of the men slated to leave in these changes. Now it is rumored that Moran would like to ship Groh, Ivy Wingo, Larry Kopf and a pitcher to Pittsburgh for that handful of Pirates Barney Dreyfuss wants to unload. His list includes Jim Zinn, Barnhart, Whitted, Schmidt and Tierney.

Sun Has Set on Career of Jim Thorpe, Wonder Athlete

By NORMAN E. BROWN

Few athletes receive a unanimous vote when fans or experts vote on "the greatest man" in any branch of sport. Jim Thorpe is one of those men who at some time or other have stood out prominently in their profession, that there is no doubt as to their greatness. Consequently the passing of the Indian wonder from athletics draws attention and regret.

Thorpe announced when his professional football team played its last game of the season a short time ago that he would not return to baseball. Time has taken its toll.

Football experts all agreed to a man that Jim Thorpe was the greatest halfback that ever played the game. And this never was intended to belittle the wonderful playing of Ned Ahman, Ted Goff, Willie Houston and other stars.

Thorpe simply lived for football. Jim was a product of the Carlisle Indian school, which produced Frank Mount Pleasant and other Redmen stars. He drew attracted attention in 1907 at the age of sixteen, starring in track and field events and at football. But it was not until several years later that his wonderful playing under Glenn Warner's tutelage won him world-wide fame. Fleet as a deer, brainy in his handling of the ball and his running, superbly built for speed and endurance and possessing the colorful setting of his veins, he was the most talked of athlete of his day. For four years at the Indian school he played the caliber of football against college teams that caused him to be placed on the All-American teams each year.

In 1912 he added to his fame by going to Stockholm with the American Olympic team and there this really native American startled the athletic world by winning both the pentathlon and decathlon titles. In the events in which Thorpe was entered the judges' work consisted mainly in figuring out who finished second, third and fourth.

And then occurred the only blot on Thorpe's career. The American Athletic Union, investigated charges that Thorpe had performed as a professional. The charges ended in Thorpe returning his Olympic medals. The charges, nevertheless, did not dim the greatness of his prowess as an athlete. He had played baseball during his school days and John McGraw, with an eye to the drawing powers of the great athlete, signed him to play with the Giants.

As a drawing card Thorpe was a world's title, repeatedly. Thorpe's ability to maintain his wonderful speed and endurance and ability through years of grueling contests against the picked players of the American colleges was phenomenal. But age finally told. The past season found him handicapped with injuries—something new to the elusive Thorpe. And his speed was missing. So it looks like good-bye to the greatest Redman that ever wore a spiked shoe.

JOE BENJAMIN LOOMS AS NEWEST ASPIRANT TO BENNY LEONARD'S TITLE

Eastern ring critics are now discussing young Joe Benjamin as the latest lightweight sensation—the newest "man who may wear Leonard's crown." Benjamin's recent victory over Pete Hittley drew attention to him. He showed his class as a boxer previous to that in several battles which included victories over the slugging Joe Welling and Benny Valger, the "French

Davis vs. Brown

Substitutes: Fords—Powers, Bond, Dick, Grassland, Barriaga, Wood, Williams, Carlson, Walters.

The fastest professional basketball team in northern Illinois within a short distance from Janesville, the Purple Meteors of Woodstock, will lock with the R. F. L. Fords at the Coliseum rink here Monday night.

The game starts at 8:30 p. m.

A heavy outfit, the Woodstock team plans to wear down their opponents and when this is done to step out and cop the bacon. The Fords are accustomed to plenty of speed and will be on the lookout for tricks. Woodstock holds two victories over the Peaville Union club, whom the Fords defeated in an overtime game early in this season. The Woodstock aggregation claims to be composed of University of Chicago stars of success for a while. His general playing, too, was satisfactory. But he could not master big league pitching. Long hours of coaching by McGraw and his lieutenants failed to remedy Thorpe's weakness as a batter against curved-ball pitching. Eventually he was sent to the minors. He has been back and forth several times since playing with the Reds, Milwaukee and Akron.

Neither track athletes nor baseball could make Thorpe forget his first love, football, however. He was caught by the leading professional teams every fall. For several years he led and was the star of the Canton, O., team, which claimed the 1920. They feature an offensive game.

Smith, forward, is a former Beloit college player. Stoney, guard, at one time played with the Fairies. Walters is a former Marquette man. England, center, was all conference man at Rockford two years ago and played guard on the Staley's football squad. Brown, guard, comes from the Rockford Tom Cats. Capt. Sherburn, was an all conference man at Elgin, Ill.

McNitt, of the Fords, is out with injuries sustained in practice.

NEED SHELTERS TO AID SKATING

With skating taking a wonderful jump all over the country, Janesville is not without its natural places for outdoor sports. There is the gas house pond and Monterey, where hundreds during the past two weeks have been getting the joy out of life.

What is needed to boost this healthful activity is a shelter house at each place where protection may be had from bitter winds and warmly may be had. Efforts are now being made to provide these.

Discussing the possibilities Monday, A. E. Bergman, athletic director of the Y. M. C. A., and a former professional hockey player, stated:

"Janesville has the most wonderful skating opportunities in the world. All we need is a shelter-house."

Further plans are being laid to foster a hockey team or teams and to promote a race derby.

MOOSE RESUME BOWLING MONDAY

After a lapse over the holidays, the Moose bowling league will resume its weekly contests Monday night. The games will be played on the West Side alleys.

Dancing Academies Numerous in Moscow

Moscow.—This capital boasts of more dancing academies than other. The reason is that as everyone must have some sort of a stamped paper showing an occupation, in case they are stopped by the police or are traveling, many citizens have either opened or joined dancing academies. Among these are many of cabinet ministers and former generals.

WASHINGTON EDITOR DIES

Washington.—Charles S. Mitchell, editor in chief of the Washington Herald, died Monday. Mr. Mitchell, formerly editor in chief of the Daily Tribune, is survived by his wife and three children.

Jockey Clarence Kummer and his bride leaving Holy Child Jesus church after the ceremony.

Jockey Clarence Kummer, the depper little chap who rode the famous Mac O' War to his many records, and thereby became one of the most famous riders on the turf, was recently married to Miss Marion Gascoyne of Richmond Hill, near New York. Their marriage took place at the Holy Child Jesus Church there. They plan to spend their honeymoon in California and Hawaii.
